Welcome to the Kingdom of Calam

It was early in the morning when Jorge got out of his tent. Still in his smallclothes he walked up to a nearby tree and let nature have it's flow. When that was done he looked at his surroundings and smiled. He saw the metal boys of that king, knights they call themselves, keep a good watch at what he and the rest of his clan were doing. Well, they were in for a surprise once the others would arrive.

Holding his amulet in his right hand he thanked the spirit of his great-father for the opportunity that was given to him. Soon he might get his revenge, yes soon.

Of late Grrrok felt confused, instead of smashing human heads he sat with them and 'talked' about how to deal with their common enemy. It's one thing that the Spirits ask them to not fight other Orcs, quite another to make peace with humans. He hoped this peace would be over soon, because any more of those 'meetings' and he might smash a head or two. After all, Humans were only good for two things: entertainment and meat.

Duke Richard of Oaksdale invites you all to celebrate his 46th birthday. His birthday coincides with his 20th anniversary of becoming the Duke of Oaksdale.

Everyone (except demons of Demon Wood) is invited to attend the feast of this joyous occasion.

Nobles, Calam Citizens, Orcs, Barbarians or Mountainfolk are all welcome as long as you obey the Ducal Peace on the Feast grounds.

Let the Feast begin!
